Image: Wiki Commons Have you ever wondered what it would have been like to live in ancient biblical times? Apart from technological advances, little has changed on the human side of things. Relationships are always what they used to be... Hard. Mary and Joseph are probably bickering over how the money should be spent, and Samson was probably just as jealous of the other men around Delilah as most people are on their companions. Things change, but people don't, and this personality test proves the point. Register and see what biblical couple you and your other significant best look like. Does your husband like your food, like Adam and Eve? Or is your girlfriend destined to destroy your relationship for the sake of money, as Delilah did with Samson? Details of your relationship with your parents, pets, God and each other are not prohibited. Paint a picture of what life is like with your main compression and what quiz will do the rest. Instead, the five-part series primarily explores the nuances and importance of love and relationships, while offering insight into love life of young Australian adults on the autism spectrum. Some participants go on blind dates; others give speed-dating a try. A couple gets engaged even on screen in the last episode. Aside from Jimmy's heartwarming proposal, however, we left ourselves with a lot of questions about what happened to the rest of the cast. The show, which first aired in Australia last year, has already been renewed for a second season. Don't be under any illusions about a Michael-centered spin-off, however: Creator Cian O'Clery has confirmed that season 2 of Love on The Spectrum will follow a brand new cast. But that doesn't mean you've seen the last of your favorites yet. In a new interview with Netflix, the dates discussed their love life, lessons learned, and reflections on the show. Here's what they're all doing right now — and which couples are still strong today. Ruth and Thomas This should come as no surprise to anyone who has seen Love on the Spectrum, but Ruth and Thomas are still very much in love. They married last month, and according to Instagram ruth, the couple celebrated their wedding with a post-wedding trip to a local chat café. Thomas also told Netflix that they recently moved from their rented apartment and into a house. The best part of their new home? Not only is it right next to a railroad, which Thomas loves, but it seems that there is plenty of space for the couple's many pets. Jimmy and SharnaIn one of the show's most tender moments, Jimmy proposed to Sharna, and the two joked about a possible wedding in Las Vegas. Neither has confirmed whether they are married or not, but they are certainly still together. When asked about the meaning of love, Jimmy said, I guess that's how I feel all the time when I'm with Sharna. Michael and Amanda Soon the beginning of Love on the Spectrum, no one was more excited to start dating than Michael. He initially bonded with Amanda, another toy collector, but their relationship didn't work. However, the experience prompted Michael to get there. I haven't given up on that. I have no intention of giving up, he told Netflix. I'm on a dating app. I decided to just try. Meanwhile, Amanda wrote on Instagram that even though things didn't work out with Michael, the two decided to stay friends. Chloe and LotusChloe went on two dates on the show, but one turned out much better than the other. When I was on the date with Marcus, things went well at first. We had a few things in common, but there was no chemistry... and some of the conversational topics made it very embarrassing, she told On the other hand, she kept smiling for hours after her date with Lotus, and reiterated to Netflix that it was probably one of the best moments of my life. Dating as a bisexual woman... it's as hard as it is, but being on the spectrum, I think it just makes it a lot harder, Chloe told Netflix. Right now, she's single, but she's still looking for her perfect match. I really want to find someone have a very special bond with them, like Jimmy and Sharna. MarkMark went on several dates on Love on the Spectrum and even attended a dating training camp. In the end, he didn't find love in the show, but he learned a lot from the experience. I want to be in a relationship, but at the same time, I would like my own time and I also tend to prefer routines rather than stimulate moment events, says Refinery29. For example, I need to plan that I am going to an appointment rather than having someone show up without notice, which happened to me. OliviaOlivia went on two dates, but neither worked. However, she has learned a lot about what she is looking for. I think I need a creative person, she told Netflix. She also mentioned that, to move forward, she is interested in dating women. I wasn't sure about the show, but I'm actually bisexual, she added. Aside from her love life, Olivia remains busy with her theater company and finding ways to continue acting on Zoom.AndrewOn Love on the spectrum, Andrew was interested in a girl he met during a speed dating session. Today he's still single, but that doesn't mean he's finished looking for the right person - he told Netflix that he recently decided to apply to more social gatherings and speed dating events. MaddiMaddi came out with several guys from the show, including Mark. In the end, she was still single. It was a whole new thing for me, she said. People just think that [love is] so black and white, but sometimes it can be everywhere. Today, she is focusing on her new job in a doggy daycare, and she also says she hopes to learn to drive in the near future. KelvinKelvin has not commented on his love life, but he told Netflix that he is drawing and hopes to find a job in customer service soon. According to Instagram, he also attended an anime festival recently with several friends, including fellow love on the Spectrum alun Amanda.Related Content>Show Action Button If you haven't watched Love After Lockup then you're really being a disservice yourself. The show has all the plot and anticipation of 90 Day Fiance, but with an extra layer of cops. Brittany and Marcelino Santiago Instagram: @brittany.loveafterlockup But just like with other reality dating shows, making love last even throughout the season much less once the cameras stop rolling, is difficult. So what season are two couples still going strong? What is 'Love After Lockup'? Love After Lockup tracks relations between civilians and prisoners. Most of the couples on the show met while one of the was in prison. The series follows that the prisoner gets out of prison and the couples try to make things work in the real world. Scott Davey and Elizabeth 'Lizzie' Kommes Scott Davey and Elizabeth Kommes were featured on both seasons one and two of the show. Kommes was due to be released from prison in the first season of the show, but ended up not going out after she was taken with drugs and a phone in jail. Sur Sur two of the show, she was finally released after nine years of being in prison. While in prison, Davey sent her money, for more than $90,000. When she was released, she expected him to make him bear his financial obligations to her, but he eventually had to admit that he was broke. If you don't have money, I dont need you, she told him. I'm done. Goodbye Scott! The two are no longer together. Clint Brady and Tracie Wagaman Clint Brady and Tracie Wagaman had a tumultuous relationship from the beginning. After being released from prison, Wagaman left Brady on their wedding night to go and find drugs. Brady did not hear from Wagaman for eight days after the wedding because she had been arrested again. When she was released, the couple was able to patch things up. The two men renewed their vows on March 31, 2019 and are still together. Caitlin Gainer and Matt Frasier's relationship was doomed from the start. When Frasier got out of prison, he and Gainer moved in with his mother. It wasn't long before Frasier lived up to his old habits, stealing cars and taking drugs. After Frasier was unable to support Gainer when his mother died, the two eventually separated. They didn't get back together. Gainer, however, is still in touch with Frasier's mother, according to her Instagram post. Brittany Santiago and Marcelino Santiago Fans were a little worried about Brittany Santiago when she came out of prison like her boyfriend at the time, Marcelino Santiago seemed a little controlling. But the couple were able to work through their problems, including Brittany's feelings for her ex-girlfriend, and were married. They now have a child together. Megan, Michael Simmons, and Sarah Simmons Megan, Michael Simmons and Sarah Simmons had one of the show's most complicated relationships. Sarah had no idea that Michael was married to Megan the whole time they were dating. He juggled the two women throughout the season until Sarah finally confronted Megan and told her she was carrying Michael's baby. Michael ended things with Megan at the end of the season, but things weren't really over. According to Reality TV World, Megan admitted on Instagram Live that she is still talking to Michael. Michael.
